Getting Started with Budget Dialup

Now that you've installed the Budget Dialer, follow the steps below to connect to the Internet.

1) Double-click the Budget Dialer icon on your desktop

2) Click the Properties button

3) Click the Phone Book button

4) Select your state

5) Scroll the list of numbers to find one local to your area

6) Click once to highlight your local access number

7) Click OK

Note: Call your local operator to verify that the access number you select is local for your calling area.

8) Modify the access number so that it appears exactly like it would if you were dialing the number on a telephone.

If you do not need to dial the area code for a local number, delete the area code.

If you need to first dial a number to get an outside line, such as 9, enter that number and a comma in front of the access number. Example: 9,606-4023.

9) Click OK

Now that you've entered you access number, enter your username and password, and click connect. If you don't want to re-type your password each time, click the save password box.

When you connect, you will be directed to the Budget Dialup member site where you can change your username and password, check your account balance and setup your email.

To disconnect, close your browser window; you should get a message that asks if you want to disconnect. If you don't get this message, double-click the shortcut on your desktop or double-click the small Budget Dialup icon in your system tray (near the clock) and then click "Disconnect".
